

Since The Capitol Attack, Fortune 500 Companies And Corporate Trade Groups Donated Over $800,000 To Election Denying House Administration Subcommittee Republicans Investigating The January 6th Committee

SUMMARY: In early March, Republicans on the House Administration Subcommittee on Oversight launched an investigation into the January 6th Committee's findings. The inquiry will be headed by Rep. Barry Loudermilk (GA-11), who has "personal beef" with the January 6th Committee after it sought to investigate the tours of the Capitol that Loudermilk led on January 5, 2021. Loudermilk will be joined in the effort by Rep. Morgan Griffith (VA-9) and Rep. Greg Murphy (NC-3), both of whom voted against certifying the 2020 election after the violence on the Capitol.

These House Administration Oversight Subcommittee Republicans received over $800,000 in donations from major companies and trade groups since the January 6th attack:

- Rep. Barry Loudermilk (GA-11) has received $242,890 in donations from Fortune 500 companies and trade associations.
- Rep. Morgan Griffith (VA-9) has received $288,995 in donations from Fortune 500 companies and trade associations.
- Rep. Greg Murphy (NC-3) has received $281,500 in donations from Fortune 500 companies and trade associations.

In March 2023, After Months Of Hinting, House Republicans Launched An Investigation Into The January 6th Committee—Led By Rep. Barry Loudermilk, Who Refused To Interview About A Constituent Tour He Gave On Capitol Grounds The Day Before The Attack.

In March 2023, Republicans On The House Administration's Subcommittee On Oversight Launched An Investigation Into The January 6th Committee—Led By Rep. Barry Loudermilk, Who Refused To "Voluntarily Interview" About A Constituent Tour He Gave In House Office Buildings The Day Before The Attack.

On March 8, 2023, The GOP-Led House Administration Subcommittee On Oversight Announced It "Launched An Inquiry" Into The January 6th Committee. "A Republican-controlled House committee launched an inquiry Wednesday into the Democratic-controlled Jan. 6 committee, which a staff member said will review whether pertinent information about the riot was omitted from the high-profile examination of the attack on the U.S. Capitol. [...] The House Administration's subcommittee on oversight will be combing through the massive amount of records collected by the Jan. 6 committee, which was dissolved in January, said the staffer, with the goal of analyzing how the panel conducted the investigation." Since June 2022, The Chair And Members Of The House Administration Committee Have Expressed That There Would Be A “Role” For The Committee “To Dig Back Into The Work Of” The United States House Select Committee On The January 6 Attack.

In June 2022, Then Ranking Republican Member Of The House Administration Committee Rodney Davis Said “When Republicans Once Again Hold The Gavel [...] One Of Our First Priorities Is Going To Be Launching A Full Investigation Into Speaker Nancy Pelosi And The Select Committee’s Circus.” “When Republicans once again hold the gavel and I am Chairman of the House Administration Committee, one of our first priorities is going to be launching a full investigation into Speaker Nancy Pelosi and the Select Committee’s circus. Not only has the Select Committee broken over 200 years of precedent and their own House rules, wasted millions in taxpayer dollars, and overstepped way outside of their legislative authority -- we believe there have been violations of citizens’ due process and privacy rights.” House Administration Committee, [6/9/22]

In February 2023, House Administration Committee Chair Bryan Steil Said There Will Be A “Role” For The Committee “To Dig Back Into The Work Of” The January 6th Committee, But He Could Not Say “What That Process Will Look Like.” “For now, Republicans are holding back on pledges to dig back into the work of the select committee itself. Steil said there would be a ‘role’ for the Administration Committee but that he hadn’t ‘reached any conclusions as to exactly what that process will look like.’” Politico, [2/22/23]

The House Administration Committee “Holds Power Over Congressional And Electoral Operations.” “The Administration Committee, which holds power over congressional and electoral operations, is used to taking a backseat to more headline-grabbing panels of the House like Judiciary or Oversight. Members often half-joke that the committee is chiefly focused on the House gym, office assignments or mice infestations.” Politico, [2/22/23]

House Administration Subcommittee Republicans Downplayed The Severity Of The Insurrection, Voted Against Certifying The 2020 Election Even After The Violence, And Opposed Investigations Into The Riot.

Rep. Barry Loudermilk, Who Will Chair The House Administration Subcommittee On Oversight, Voted Against Certifying The 2020 Election, Voted Against Forming A Committee To Investigate The Events Of January 6th, And “Led A Tour Of The Capitol Complex On Jan. 5, 2021” That The January 6 Committee Sought Information About.

Loudermilk “Led A Tour Of The Capitol Complex On Jan. 5, 2021” Where “Participants Took Photos Of Stairwells And Other Elements Of The Capitol Complex Not Typically Of Interest To Visitors.” “The House Republican who led a tour of the Capitol complex on Jan. 5, 2021, that further fueled Democratic worries of pre-riot ‘reconnaissance’ could end up leading the GOP’s investigation of the Jan. 6 select committee. Rep. Barry Loudermilk found himself in the select panel’s crosshairs over his Jan. 5 tour, where participants took photos of stairwells and other elements of the Capitol complex not typically of interest to visitors.” Politico, [7/21/22]

Loudermilk Told Reporters The Committee To Investigate January 6th Did Not Ask Him To Testify, “Despite The Fact That They Have Written Multiple Letters Requesting That He Answer Questions About His Role In Leading A Tour Of The Capitol Complex On Jan. 5.” “Rep. Barry Loudermilk (R-GA) claimed Wednesday that members of the House committee investigating the Jan. 6 insurrection ‘haven’t asked’ him to testify, despite the fact that they have written multiple letters requesting that he answer questions about his role in leading a tour of the Capitol complex on Jan. 5.” Daily Beast, [6/16/22]

In July 2022, Loudermilk Said He Was “Interested In Chairing The House Administration Committee” And “Using It To Dig Into The Jan. 6 Panel,” But He Denied That Being A Target Of The Jan. 6 Committee Created A Conflict Of Interest For Him. “Loudermilk told POLITICO that he is interested in chairing the House Administration Committee in a future GOP majority, using it to dig into the Jan. 6 panel and Capitol security. [...] Loudermilk denied that being a target of the Jan. 6 committee created a conflict of interest for him as a possible future Administration chair, saying ‘there’s no conflict of interest because I did nothing wrong, and they know it.’” Politico, [7/21/22]

A Year After The January 6, 2021, Insurrection At The Capitol, Griffith Said He “Never Really Had A Sense Of Fear” During The Attacks On The Capitol, And “President Trump Couldn’t Stop” The Events That Took Place. “9th District Republican Congressman Morgan Griffith remembers January 6, 2021, well. ‘I was on the floor when people started beating on the doors and that kind of thing. But I know a lot of people were worried and afraid. I never really had a sense of fear. The Capitol police came and got us and said, 'We think it's time for you all to leave,' said Griffith. 'You know there were a lot of people there that day. Some were intent on doing bad things. President Trump couldn't stop that. I couldn't stop that. Nobody could've stopped that,' he said." One Year After The Events Of January 6th, Murphy Said House Democrats "Have Been Fixated On Exploiting The Tragic Events Of January 6th For Political Gain" And That "Our Nation Is No Closer To Understanding Why The U.S. Capitol Was So Unprepared." "'I have been very clear that I believe the events of January 6th were shameful and never should have happened,' said Rep. Murphy. 'It was a terrible, yet avoidable, security failure that can never happen again. Those who came into the U.S. Capitol unlawfully should be held accountable. I will never discount that. Yet, regrettably, one year later, our nation is no closer to understanding why the U.S. Capitol was so unprepared. [...] Unfortunately, instead of supporting Capitol security upgrades and ensuring accountability for those who violated our rule of law, House Democrats, led by Speaker Nancy Pelosi, have been fixated on exploiting the tragic events of January 6th for political gain.'"
